Connor's Corner Don't you agree that you need to look at both sides of a situation to make an intelligent decision on what is being asked? How many times have you heard "He/she had good intentions" or "I had no idea it was a scheme I was getting into"? I want to talk to you about intentions. Defined by Webster's as, "a plan of action, and an aim that guides action."

It is rather obvious that an intention is the result of meaningful thought. I feel that when you have something in mind for a particular purpose or use and you wish to share it with others, the results are deliberate, intentional, and purposeful for many in the future. I believe firmly that it's not what's on the outside or what one may have to say that matters. It's what is inside, deep in a person's heart, that matters.

So I feel that this prayer is fitting, "Lord and Savior, please forgive me for the times when my actions are not consistent with my attitude. Please Lord, prohibit me from intentionally or unintentionally causing harm to anyone of your children. Amen. -ECR

Residents celebrated Chinese New Year with a homemade dinner complete with fortune cookies and chopsticks! Happy year of the dog!

Words to ponder: "Love can change a person the way a parent can change a baby- awkwardly, and often with a great deal of mess." -Lemony Snicket
