Some people argue that life can be determined by things you value. With that stated, first realize this also means that life cannot be explained by things you value. However I want to take a closer look into this assessment of life. Obviously the term "life" has a broad meaning. It ranges from, "The period of an event unto death" to "A specific state of earthly existence to a vital or living person." Is life valuable? Typically people define value as something with a monetary worth. I feel there needs to be more emphasis placed on the relative worth, utility, degree of excellence, and importance when we value something. There is nothing I value more than my faith in God and His promises. I do firmly believe eternal life has no price tag. My dismissal of sins can't be purchased either. Thanks be to God. Enough said. So it pains us to say goodbye to one of our beloved residents, Linda Crane. Linda has been at Hosanna for 15 years! She is sweet, fun, and always has a joke ready to tell. We will miss you Linda.

Words to ponder: Among those whom I like or admire, I can find no common denominator, but among those whom I love, I can: all of them make me laugh. — W. H. Auden
