Today's issue is in thankful recognition of Mr. Wayne Orr, head golf professional of Brown Acres Golf Course. His consistent, kind care for others is appreciated and his positive attitude is one we should learn from. When being complimented for his many personal and professional talents, after accepting praise, Wayne points out his focus each day is "to provide golfers with a happy frame of mind and a place they can relax...and that's not easy to do!" I couldn't agree with you more. Golfers are too concerned/fascinated with always trying to either get or keep on a game that rather than being casual they focus on changing clubs to enhance accuracy, control, and distance, what grips the clubs have, are they playing at the best speed, are the feel and roll of putts perfectly aligned, does a better score start with a healthy diet or should best play come from the driver, irons, putter, or wedge? Wayne Orr, who has many significant roles and important roles as head golf pro teaches us two life lessons. First, you will do better if you keep a relaxing positive attitude. Secondly, it's nice to be important, but it's more important to be nice. Thank you, Wayne Orr. You are a good man and a caring friend. ECR
