

Katie: kwalters.hosanna@comcast.net Susan: srdistefano@comcast.net

MANY HAPPY RETURNS! We've been on a birthday party binge lately. Above and right, we celebrate Ian's birthday. Below, how do you surprise your boss for her birthday? Celebrate it a week early!!

Upcoming activities
Wednesday, Feb. 3: Movies after dinner:
Thursday, Feb. 4: bowling in the am. And come on people, I've seen your scores...you can do better!! Let's leave at 10:30
Friday, Feb. 5: Brooke is back from the Hart Gallery. We're working with string, wood, and nails this week.
Sunday, Feb 7: It's Superbowl Sunday! Will it be the Broncos or the Panthers who win? Who will have the best commercial? And what about the snacks?? Game starts at 6:30, commentators on all day.

Bobby and Michael enjoyed the show by Jimmy Tawater at the Civic Center recently.

EDITOR'S NOTE:
Connor and I were talking about his column last week on intentions. I shared with him a quotation that I posted on my door in college: The road to hell is paved with good intentions. We agreed that while good intentions are great, on their own, they are not enough. I pointed out to him the passage from James 2:14-26 about having faith without works. And then I steered him to that wise Jedi Master, Yoda, who says "Do, or do not. There is no try." Connor went on his way, fully intending to let these thoughts percolate and come back to me with another column for this week. Alas, although his intentions were good, no column was forthcoming. Perhaps next week?? 😊

Left: Stacy and Patrick listen as Linda and mom Carol Green dance to the music. Thanks, Carol, for sponsoring this event!
Jamison Dean, above, entertained the residents last week at Faith House.