

Katie: kwalters.hosanna@comcast.net Susan: srdistefano@comcast.net

This week's activities:

Tuesday, May 2—Volunteers from Liberty Mutual come to work on the property!

Friday, May 5—Brooke is back from the Hart Gallery for another creative activity at 10:00.

Friday, May 5—SHINE prom.

We told you she was a woman of many talents!! Above, Connie and Orlando replace some burned vinyl siding while below, Katie and Carolyn enjoy the end result!

Although I am sincere in my repeated message to remain positive through life's consistent changes, today's issue will be what I plan to be unique. I hope you are willing to open your mind and truly think. If you have a brain-injury, all the better. There will be no convenient thinking when you want to, nor in the manner you wish to, either. I want all my readers to think about this: Doesn't it seem that every life form except humans strives to reach its maximum potential? For instance, if you were a tree, yes, there are limits on movement, but how tall would you grow... likely as tall as possible. Consider this — human beings differ: they have been given the blessing/opportunity to choose. One may decide to be all that he/she can be, or one can choose to be less. The ongoing personal question becomes: will you stretch yourself up to the full measure of the challenge to see what all you can possibly do? That, my friends, I cannot answer for you. I can, however, remind you of this telling truth. Once again, think about this: indecision is the thief of opportunity.

ECR

Connor's

Corner

Liberty Mutual Insurance volunteers strike again! This week saw a small but hard-working group tackling some of the smaller jobs around the property: assembling, weeding, spreading mulch, pruning, and planting. Thanks, guys!! We're already planning for next year!

