

WEEKLY ACTIVITIES

Mon., April 27:

10 a.m., Stretch It Out! Yoga/meditation at Hope House.

2 p.m., Stamp It Up! We're going to make cards with stamps and ink.

Tues., April 28:

10 a.m., Take it a little easier with a "Low Impact" exercise session followed by a nature walk.

2 p.m., We'll make some Mother's Day gifts. (Shhh ....It's a surprise. Don't tell Mom!)

Wed., April 29:

10 a.m., We're having a Card Fest with Game Master Michael I

2 p.m., This will be good clean fun! Join us to make some soap!

6 p.m., Restaurant Dinner Dine-In.

7 p.m., Movie Night. Let's watch "Little Women." Yes ... we'll have popcorn!

Thurs. April 30:

10 a.m., Yummmm.... Time for Cooking Class.

2 p.m., Grab bag "Arts and Crafts".

3 p.m., Dance Party!! Woo-Hoo!

Friday, May 1:

10 a.m., Art with Mary at The Tree House.

2 p.m., Back by popular demand ... Karoke!

Connor's Corner

SOMEDAY:

A definite possibility

An unspecified time

Partial uncertainty

Absolute potential

Viability present

Not yet in existence

Anticipation grows

Eventual occurrence ...

Someday

When you hear or use the word, "Someday," why is it our typical nature to become cynical and sarcastic? Surely you've heard: "Yeah, someday I'll get a new car, house, husband, wife or the day I win the lottery." I wish we were not so unrealistic or always trying to be cute. Think about it. "Someday" it will be time to determine where our souls will forever live. If you keep faith in His eternal promise, then it's a suggestion to avoid joking about the may-bes life may offer. Remaining content with His plan will allow a relaxed mind and actually a healthy attitude on when "Someday" will be a reality.

It's an opinion I highly recommend.

