Don't Forget to Turn Your Clocks
Back One Hour on Saturday Night

My Hosanna friends, I want us to take a look at the aberration of the Halloween holiday. Admittedly, it brings up various acts and traditions that ironically occur on the eve of All Saints' Day.

Saints, who are recognized by canonization as members of certain religious groups who can intercede for people on earth, or ones who have died and gone to heaven, are highly esteemed, loved and respected. Isn't it interesting that we celebrate Halloween by dressing up in various costumes, and then spend our time begging for treats, creating various pranks, and primarily trying to scare or make others afraid.

Pardon me. I see no relief in scaring people for fun or pleasure. I feel saints are a heavenly blessing that we need to appreciate, not mock. So as Halloween ends, let's remember: God remains with us constantly. We all have been given courage, hope, joy, and a meaningful purpose. So, with humility, let's try to see the holiday the way God views us. We were important enough for Calvary. Think about that.
